COURSE DESCRIPTION

Marketing is the only revenue-focused and customer-facing function of business. Without marketing to generate revenue, a business would not last long! Marketing's fundamental concepts permeate virtually all areas of business and, on a personal level, can help students navigate their careers. As the core marketing course in the business school, this course aims to train students in the "language of marketing" and to help them understand its philosophies, decision-areas, tactics, and strategies. To facilitate this goal, we will frequently put on the hat of a chief marketing officer or marketing manager and unpack ideas in the context of complex organizations striving to compete in a dynamic global environment. As we go, we will consider how marketers can help organizations succeed (or fail miserably), reflect on marketing's role in society, and explore the implications of marketing for your future career. Ultimately, we will produce viable marketing plans that could actually help real businesses in the countries visited by Semester at Sea.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- Understand and comfortably use basic marketing terminology.
- Understand and describe the key elements of the market environment: customers, competitors, company, and the external environment (economic, technological, political, legal, cultural, and social). This objective is especially critical on Semester at Sea.
- Understand how marketing managers segment markets, choose target markets, and choose a desired positioning. This includes country verticals and global segments.
- Describe the elements of the marketing mix (Product, Place, Promotion and Price).
- Develop a coherent marketing strategy that addresses the specific needs of a chosen target market, drawing on an analysis of the market environment.
- Appreciate how marketing operates in different countries, using examples from markets encountered on the voyage.
- Understand ethical issues in marketing and how they vary across countries.

FIELD WORK

Semester at Sea field experiences allow for an unparalleled opportunity to compare, contrast, and synthesize the different cultures and countries encountered over the course of the voyage. In addition to the one required field class, students will complete independent field assignments that span multiple countries.

Field Class & Assignments

The field class for this course will be on September 15th in Gdańsk, Poland.

Field Class attendance is mandatory for all students enrolled in this course. Do not book any individual travel plans or a Semester at Sea sponsored trip on the day of your field class.

Field Classes constitute at least 20% of the contact hours for each course, and are developed and led by the instructor.

Creating Value for the European Solidarity Centre

Field Class Title: Creating Value for the European Solidarity Centre

Field Class Description: This field class will engage students in the process of using market research and strategy to create economic value for the European Solidarity Centre. Students will learn more about the organization's growth goals, customer needs, potential market segments, current products/services, revenue streams, and key partners. During our visit and conversations, students will learn more about the organization, how marketing can be a force for positive impact, and present their ideas for feedback. Throughout the course, students will work in groups to generate new ideas as part of the course's final project.

Learning Objectives:

- Appreciate how marketing operates in a different country using the local partner as a specific context.
- Identify viable marketing models and growth opportunities for a public good organization.
- Develop a marketing perspective on the specific "user experience" needs of customers.

Program: We will meet with the European Solidarity Centre staff about marketing needs and experience The European Solidarity Centre as consumer of the experience.

Outcome: Students will learn from the European Solidarity Centre staff about key marketing questions which they will investigate later on-ship through interviews, experiments and survey data from other SAS students. The field class report will be the first part of the class project to be delivered to the European Solidarity Centre electronically at the voyage's end.

Field Class Assignment: Students will write a 2-page report as a group outlining the key research questions their group will address in the marketing project. They will also describe their marketing insights from the visit in this report.

Due Date: September 24

Independent Field Assignment: Marketing Photo Journal from Multiple Ports

Students will choose a customer experience (e.g., in-country programming) to observe, document, and compare across three countries. One example must come from a European country (Poland, Portugal, Spain or Croatia), one from an African country (Morocco or Ghana) and one example from an American country (Brazil, Trinidad and Tobago or Ecuador; note that Costa Rica is not possible given the due date). They will compare and contrast marketing strategies (paying attention to product, price, place/distribution, promotion, and the impact of macro-environmental forces). This will be turned in as a PowerPoint presentation with a narrative in the Notes section. The assignment will be evaluated for thoroughness in addressing the aspects of marketing strategy, depth/quality of insights, linkages back to course content, and photo-documentation.

Due Date: December 8

All within the University are affected by the cooperative commitment to academic integrity. All Semester at Sea courses adhere to this Academic Integrity Policy and Student Conduct Code.
